REUBEN BRAININ—OUR DISTINGUISHED GUEST

Our local community will this week-end have the privilege of welcoming one of the foremost men in the world of Hebrew letters: Reuben Brainin is recognized as the dean of Hebrew literature, and is one of the most picturesque Jewish personalities of the generation.

When Brainin first commenced writing some forty years ago modern Hebrew literature was in its infancy. The Jewish reading public still under the influence of the synagogue and religious literature had had little contact with the culture of the outside world. Those who had tasted the sweets of European literature had for the most part drifted away entirely from the sphere of Jewish cultural concerns. The nascent spirit of Jewish nationalism made its appeal largely among a body of enthusiasts whose relation to literature was marked rather by intensity then fine discernment.

The Hebrew language as a medium of expression of modern conditions was undeveloped and unpolished. Extravagances of diction and figure were considered the highest stylistic accomplishments, and entire sentences were lifted from the Bible and made to serve in nineteenth century description and dialogue. And the standards of judgment which prevailed in that literature were as turgid as the phraseology. Hebrew literature was riding on the wavecrest of a nationalist revival and shared the vices of its unbridled vigour.

Brainin was one of the first men who introduced into Hebrew the riper standards of world literature. Out of the obsolescent material of classical Hebrew he fashioned a medium that bore the graces and charms of the finest mid-nineteenth century literature of Germany. And by bringing to bear the newest literary criteria of Europe on the products of the Ghetto, he helped to direct the course of modern Hebrew literature along the main stream of European cultural achievement.

A brilliant stylist and penetrating critic, Brainin sought to elevate not only the literature of his people to the highest standards of perfection, but their life as well. His Jewish nationalism presupposed a belief in the preservative and creative powers of the Jewish people. And he wished to see in their life the exemplification of the ideals of beauty and dignity which he deemed worthy of a people of culture. Brainin abhors pettiness. His whole career as a writer and public man has been one continuous battle against the sordid and the picayune.

Jewish life is becoming continuously more and more complex. We have not many men who are concerning themselves profoundly with the problems of Jewish life. We have many public men and leaders and even writers who are interested in this or that phase of Jewish. But it requires men of sweeping vision and profound understanding to envisage Jewish existence as a unified whole, pregnant with the significance of an historic process. We have very few such seers in Jewish life to-day. Brainin is one of the precious few we have left. A keen observer and student of Jewish psychology in all its varied manifestations, he can still discern the harmonizing formula that governs the mainspring of Jewish existence throughout the world.

A RELIGIOUS TEACHER'S VIEW OF BLASPHEMY

BY RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

"And he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord shall surely be put to death; all the congregation shall certainly stone him; as well the stranger and the home-born when he blasphemeth the name shall be put to death." He that speaks profanely of the name of God shall be stoned. Though this verse specifies the name of God, it actually meant that whoever speaks profanely of the character or attributes or personality of God shall surely be put to death. To understand fully the viewpoint of this verse, we must appreciate the psychology of primitive and particularly of primitive Semitic peoples. For them the name of an individual was not something apart from him. The name of an individual was that individual himself. The name was somehow intricately and mystically interwoven in the nature of the person bearing it. A change of name implied a change of personality. Abraham's name initially was Abram. It remained Abram as long as he was an individual nomad chief, like the many chiefs who wandered about Palestine pasturing their sheep. But when God made a covenant with Abram, and he was destined to become the founder of a great people and of great religions, when Abram became a historic figure of paramount importance, his name was changed to Abraham, indicating the change in his status. Similarly Jacob's name was changed. After he had struggled with the angels, and had overcome the initial weaknesses in his character, his name became Israel. He became a new personality. The custom of the change of the name of a person on the bed of illness familiar to many illustrates how this old primitive notion still holds sway. The change of the name of a person will foil the angel of death, who when he comes for Alex finds Samuel. A Talmudic episode indicates further that a name meant more to earlier peoples than it means to us. We say that a rose by any other name would be just as fragrant. But such was not their view. The Talmud relates the adventure of a rabbi who while walking along the road and reading the Bible was so engrossed in his reading, that he failed to perceive that a band of wandering demons were attacking him. He continued reading aloud, and when he came to the name of God, the demons were routed and fled from him. Mentioning the name of God, was bringing him there and the magic power of God's name put to flight the demons.

Because of this power of names, the ancient Israelite never pronounced the name of God. It was only to be pronounced once a year by the High Priest in the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement. God's name was the ineffable name, and not to be uttered. To this day the Hebrew word for God, Adonoy, is not the name whereby it was known to our ancestors. What it was actually is a matter for speculation among scholars. The name Jehovah is incorrect and was due to the ignorance of Christian scholars of the traditional Jewish reading—for Adonoy is not read as it is written. Some scholars feel that God's name for our fathers was Yahveh which means creator. But that too is but a guess, though perhaps a good guess. Understanding this awe for names and this attitude towards their significance, we can understand better this apparently harsh legislation.

WEDDINGS

Godine—Lasker

The wedding took place quietly Saturday, January 22, of Lillian, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Lasker, to Ben Godine, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Godine. Rabbi J. Berger officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Godine left for an extended trip to the United States.

Moscovitch—Kindestin

The marriage of Lillian, daughter of Moses Kindestin, and the late Mrs. Kindestin, to Abraham Moscovitch, was solemnized at Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, Wednesday evening, January 5, Rev. Dr. H. Abramowitz officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white georgette trimmed with Chantilly lace, with a train of satin lined with georgette. Her tulle veil was arranged in cap effect with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley and orchids. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. William Parker, of Washington, as matrong-of-honour, who wore a gown og black georgette trimmed with beads; and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. The groom was attended by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Myer Moscovitch, in a black georgette gown trimmed with beads and carried a bouquet ofOphelia roses. Jack Kindestin was best man. The ushers were Dr. Frank Rosenbaum, Ben Raginsky, Harry Levinson and Dr. Bill Kindestin. Dinner was served at Synagogue Community Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Moscovitch, who spent their honeymoon in New York, Atlantic City, Washington, and Jacksonville, Fla., have returned to town.

In loving memory of Mrs. Dina Stern, who died on February 4th, 1926. Her memory lingers in the hearts of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr and Mrs. David Schwartz.

In loving memory of Mrs. Dina Stern, who died on February 4, 1926. Though she has gone, she is still in the hearts of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Gardner.

Shalinsky.—In loving memory of our dear daughter, Fanny, who departed this life February 2nd, 1917.

—Inserted by mother and father.

Klein.—In memory of my beloved husband and our dear father, Leopold Klein, who departed this life, Adar 3, 5678.

—Ever remembered by his wife and family.

In loving memory of Esther Richstone, who departed this life February 4, 1925.

Oh how sad it was to part from her
We loved her so dear;
Cut away in the prim of life,
In the midst of fife and cheer.

—Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Tucker and family.

In loving memory of my dear sister, Esther Richstone, who passed away February 4, 1925.

We often sit and think of her
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call his own.

Inserted by sister and brother-in-law, Anna and Abe Slotsky and family, and mother.

In everlasting memory of our loving mother, Esther Richstone, who departed this life, February 4, 1925. You have left a place that cannot be replaced.

Gertrude, Abe and Rena.

Official denials notwithstanding, the "Nasz Przeglond"—mouthpiece of the Jewish Party in Warsaw—reiterates the charge that 150 persons, most of them Jews, were court-martialled following the Lithuanian revolution. It is also reported by more than one reliable newspaper that two Jews were sentenced to death, but because of protests by the Russian Government, sentences were suspended and disposition of the cases held in abeyance pending negotiations.

Every Friday

A page of correspondence in a very recent issue of The Nation, is made up of letters from principals and headmasters of boys' schools in which they express their confidence in "the high idealism of the boys of to-day and of their effort to find a better life and attain a higher goal." Alfred E. Stearns, principal of Phillips' Academy, Andover, Mass., makes a statement in his letter which deserves the widest publicity. He says: "The everlasting and selfish hammering of an older generation with distinctly lower ideals upon their impressionable minds may eventually thwart them in the attainment of the desired end. I have seen this happen in individual cases, and I am fearful lest the influence may spread. If the older group, which seeks so noisily to support an untenable position and, with a strange and almost gloating selfishness, seems to exult in the mistakes of the youngsters, would leave our boys and girls alone I should have no fears for the future. It is rather significant, and a bit tragic, that high-minded boys to-day will tell you frankly that they dread far more the temptations which beset them in the vacation periods on their return to their homes than they do those, which used to be considered hard enough, in the swirl of school and college life."

This terrible charge against the older generation is emphasized again and again in a book by Stephen S. Wise, "Child Versus Parent," and particularly in a chapter on the rise of summer camps. Dr. Wise says that the celerity with which the camp-craze swept over the country was not due to the fact that camp life is a wonderful thing for a child. He says the instant camp-vogue gives a glimpse into the want of genuine concern touching the education of children. Camps multiply because they meet the need of parents who do not know how to live with their children released from school. That children flock to summer camps is a testimony, the writer says, to the failure of parents to live a simple, wholesome life in normal, intimate contact with their children. If city-bred children should be brought close to the simplicities of nature during vacation why not in the company of their parents? Because, says Dr. Wise, parents are so little accustomed to living with their children that constant contact during the summer is more than they can stand and the summer camp is a convenient way out.

Dr. Wise comments upon "the extraordinary absence of parental care for the minds of children in contradiction to the superseduous care of the bodies." Whatever medical attention, fresh air, nurses and mothers' helps can do to protect the child is employed for the purpose. How much care is taken to protect the mental health? It is not enough to censor the movies, to call a halt to pleasure-madness, and to remove the trashy magazine from the table. Dr. Wise calls upon the parent to take the trouble to guide the recreations of the child into wholesome and creative channels.

This job is often in the hands of a father who is nothing more than a cash register, says Dr. Wise, and a mother whose life is given to the trivialities and inanities of every season's mandate, whose love is for the lesser things of life. The mother who complains of the tendencies of modern youth . . . . . did she spend her life at cards when her child was growing up? "The disease of incessant card-playing," says the writer, "has laid low multitudes of wives and mothers, that card-gambling which has been described by President Eliot as an extraordinarily unintelligent form of pleasurable excitement. The prizes of the bridge table fill the lives of many women with mentally hurtful and morally enervating excitement. What manner of children are to be reared by a generation of bridge-experts, of women half-crazed with the pleasures of the card table?"

The father whose daily life is nothing but a round of money-grubbing with cards and cheap magazines for recreation, the mother who worships the golden calf and exhibits no dignity or fineness in her dress, manner and way of living is bound to be at variance with what the child learns in church and school about growing up to be of highest character, highest ideals, highest usefulness. Of such parents the child has a perfect right to disapprove. As Dr. Wise says: "Children have the right to reject for themselves the lower standards of parents." By parents is meant the entire older generation, the older generation responsible for the war, prohibition, bootlegging, hip-flask drinking and its ugly story of the connection between too much liquor and lack of self-control. By the older generation is meant, too, those responsible for salacious plays and movies, tawdry, nasty magazines. Adolescents are rarely engaged in any of these trades.

FEBRUARY 4, 1927 — VOLUME VIII, NUMBER 15

Children have the right to reject the lower standards of the older generation, yes. But how easily may they be thwarted in high-mindedness during their formative years! It is not a wonder that the teen-age son is dissipated, offensively sophisticated, lazy, rude and exacting. Nor is it a wonder that the daughter is a know-nothing, an expensive, useless clothes-rack to be set up over a mah-jongg table. Is there anything new now about a debutante's party resolving itself into a petting bout until "three o'clock in the morning"? When the older generation discovers all this it sometimes is genuinely surprised and shocked. Time of discovery should be one of inquiry . . . . self-inquiry among parents. Where this self-inquiry is honest there is no din raised, no matter how much hair is torn or how many sets of teeth gnash. The quiet is ominous. The din is loudest where it is intended to cover up the failures, the spiritual poverty of the older generation. f.f.c.

Social Life in 1902—
Do You Remember?—

The ninth annual concert of the Hebrew Ladies' Aid Society, of Montreal, was presided over by S. W. Jacobs. Mrs. Jacob Mavolson, president, spoke. Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sessenwein, a son; and to Mr. and Mrs. H. Freedman, a son. Mrs. James Morris, mother of Mrs. E. Lichtenhein, died at the age of eighty-eight years. A. Goldstein acted as president of Baron de Hirsch Institute, while D. A. Ansell was on his annual ivsit to Mexico. Visiting governors: B. A. Boas, John Michaels, M. B. Davis, A. Michaels, M. E. Davis, Harris Vineberg, A. Jacobs, Laz Cohen, Joseph H. Jacobs, Lyon Cohen, S. Roman, F. Ship, M. Vineberg, D. S. Friedman, A. M. Vineberg, S. W. Jacobs, Mark Workman, M. Goldstein, J. Scherman, J. Hirsch, H. Rutenberg, H. Kellert, Louis Rubenstein, J. Goldstein, Lazarus Rubenstein, M. Sessenwein, C. I. deSola, S. Saxe, B. Goldstein, M. Hirsch. The marriage of Miss Rose Lichtenhein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lichtenhein, to Leon Goldsmith, of Cincinnati, took place at the bride's home, Rabbi I. Landman officiating. The ceremony was performed under an arch of laurel and white flowers in the drawing room. The bride was given away by her father. Her sister, Miss Zelma Lichtenhein, was maid of honour and her cousin, Miss Gertrude Foss, of Boston, was bridesmaid. Jack Goldsmith, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride was gowned in white panne velvet appliqued with white duchess lace, with tulle veil and wreath of orange blossoms, her flowers a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honour wore yellow panne velvet and carried yellow roses. The bridesmaid wore white silk tulle over white silk and carried white carnations. The bride's mother was in black embroidered velvet and the groom's mother was in white Irish lace. Mrs. Loewenstein, sister of the groom, wore cream renaissance lace; Mrs. Fess, the bride's aunt, black embroidered crepe de Chine; Mrs. S. E. Lichtenhein, white pompadour silk; Mrs. P. Lewin, black lace. They all carried shower bouquets of white carnations. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond bracelet and pearl pin for her hair; to each of the bride's attendants, a bracelet with monogram in pearls. Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith went south to live in Cincinnati later. Her going-away gown was of miroir velvet of gun-metal shade trimmed with Irish lace, with hat and stole of squirrel.

which demands the penalty of death for blasphemers, for the blasphemer was not only abusing a name, he was doing violence to God himself.

But why, my friends, did man feel the need to protect God against his traducers? Was not God strong enough and powerful enough to punish those who offended him, without having need of man's puny help? Could not God settle his own scores with his rebellious children? Did man have to do that for him? Again, we must understand the religious point of view which animated this legislation. To all early peoples, God was much closer than He is to the man of to-day. God did not come to early man at the end of a theological formula. Man did not have to be thundered at from pulpits to be aware of His existence. God was not taught to man in religious schools, whose attendance had to be artificially stimulated. Man wanted God, much more eagerly than our generation wants Him. He needed Him and yearned for His assistance. God was conceived to be a powerful spirit or force, who would do favours to those who did favours for Him. God was, therefore, constantly to be courted, to be humoured, to be cajoled and to be bribed. Man therefore brought the best of everything to his gods—he brought them the first of his flocks, aye, even the first of his children, the first of his fruits, the first of his produce. Man gave him sweet incense and sacrifice to win his favour. Where man erred or sinned, which meant offended his god, he hastened to bring him sin-offerings and meal offerings to appease his wrath and to regain his favour. Blaspheming his name, which meant besmirching his character made the deity very angry, and man therefore hastened to punish the offender in order to mollify the righteous anger of God. For the whole tribe would be held to account for one man's unpunished offense against God. The legislation against blasphemy in Israel was enacted to avert the punishment of the Deity from the entire community. A member of the community had insulted God, and lest all be punished, that member had to be put to death.

This severe penalty reveals to us the limitations of the god-idea of this legislator. Surely it was not a God of love and kindness who demanded the life of a blasphemer. Surely stoning to death for a mortal, who in his ignorance or who in his excitement had blasphemed God, was a exceedingly heavy price. Surely a God aware of human frailties, who wants repentance and not punishment, who senses the struggle of man on earth, would never have been so severe and so harsh. He would never have become as angry as our ancestors feared He would, nor would He have rejoiced in the death of the sinner. The God portrayed in this legislation is not the God whom Jews and Christians worship to-day. The God portrayed in this law of blasphemy is not the God of Micah, Amos, Isaiah or Jeremiah. The God whom men feel desires the death of the blasphemer has been supplanted and displaced in the history of Israel.

To Brainin. Jewish life is not a chaos; it is a symphonic play of diversified tones. He understands its basic rhythm.

Were our community but alive to Jewish values it would do proper honour to its distinguished guest—one of the creators of a literature which it should cherish—one of the seers of a generation which requires interpreting—one of the disseminators of light and idealism in an age which is sadly in need of them. And by honouring Reuben Brainin, it would be honouring itself.

A. B. B.

Nor is it a reflection on Israel that at one time it conceived and worshipped a God who demanded the death of men who maligned Him. For this narrow and limited idea of God represents a stage in the evolution of religion. It represents an epoch in man's growing and evolving consciousness of God. The study of comparative religions has brought us to the knowledge that the same laws which operate in all fields of human endeavour operate in the field of religion. Just as the state has a long history and represents a development from the family to the clan to the nation, to the League of Nations. Just as the complex human body is a development from simpler, less efficient organisms, just as our own modern speech is the fruit of the inchoate calls of the cave-man, just as our symphonies are the climax of cacophonous primitive music, so also our religion is the product of many years of development. Just as man had to struggle to develop all his institutions, so man had to struggle to develop his religion. Religion is not a perfected gift hurled down from the heavens above to man. Religion, rather, is an achievement of man over many centuries. Not ashamed shall we be of the crude and primitive beliefs of all of our fathers, of the gods of gold and of silver, of tree and of fountain, of wind and of stones, of the sun and of the moon, of fertility and of vegetation, of light and darkness. Not ashamed shall we be of the ritual, sometimes harsh and inhuman, sometimes bestial and sensual, whereby all our fathers worshipped God. The humble origin of religion can readily acknowledge, and glory in its remarkable development, glory in man that he rose from crude beliefs to lofty faiths, from primitive concepts to ethical monotheism. The miracle and wonder of it is that the war-God of Israel, called by some the cruel Jehovah, became the God who requires only of man that he do justly and love mercy and walk humbly with God; that the god who fiendishly desires the death of the sinner, becomes He "Who desires not the death of the sinner, but that He return to Me and live."

It is incorrect, my friends, to speak of the God idea of the Bible—for the Bible reveals many concepts about God. There is a variety of God-ideas in the Bible. In the first two chapters of Genesis, we have two different Gods represented to us—one a spiritual being, who creates the universe by His majestic words, and the other an anthropomorphic God—a God with hands and a face and arms who fashions woman out of the clay of the earth and breathes into her His life-giving breath. Which is the God of the Bible—the God who in Leviticus laid down a minute ritual for priest and people or the God of Amos, Who says "I hate, I despise your feasts, and I will take no delight in your solemn assemblies"? Who is the God of the Bible, the God who established the festivals and the new moons or the God of Isaiah who says, "Your new moons and your appointed seasons My soul hateth"? It is very apparent and clear that we cannot speak of the God of the Bible, for the Bible contains many different and even contradicting ideas of God.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

Do your best and you lose

No home can hope to have the equipment necessary to do family washing as it should be done. This laundry was planned, built and equipped to the most minute detail to do just one kind of wash - "family wash." It is not an ordinary laundry. It can do better work than your very best home effort and at such trifling cost that the old way is no longer worth the effort. That our customers are satisfied is evidenced by the fact that for the fourth time we are doubling the size of our plant. Let us tell you all about it over your phone.

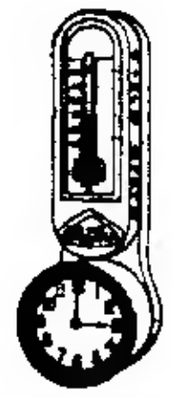
YOU CAN HEAT YOUR HOME BETTER WITH GAS

GAS—

Simplest, Safest, Cleanest for Home Heating —

As simple as your gas range, just as safe, just as clean, just as dependable — the ideal way to heat your home.

The gas burner equipped with automatic heat regulation is the last word in home heating comfort and convenience. From the first cool days of fall, through the bitter winter weather and in milder spring it maintains the comfortable temperature you want both day and night without a moment's care or attention. Not even fuel to order — and you pay for your fuel after you use it. The cleanest method of heating. Silent, odorless.



The Heat Regulator is the only furnace you need with gas heating.

Do not accept less in heating comfort. Find out now about the gas burner with the clock-equipped heat regulator which automatically lowers the temperature level at night for economical, healthful heating; raises it again in the early morning so the house is comfortable when you get up.

Cost Estimates Gladly Furnished

Gas heating now is within the means of practically every buyer of modern heating equipment. Let us furnish estimates on the cost of heating your home with gas. No obligation.

WEDDINGS

Wolfe-Bleeman

The marriage of Betty Bleeman to Barney Wolfe, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wolfe, was solemnized Sunday, January 23, at the home of the bride's parents. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory velvet trimmed with georgette, her veil arranged in Spanish effect with orange blossoms and pearls. She carried Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honour, Miss Helen Bleeman, sister of the bride, wore pink chiffon with black lace and carried Columbia roses. The best man was Louis Bender. Mrs. Bender, sister of the groom, wore white georgette with crystal beads. A reception was held. Covers were laid for seventy-five. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe left for Detroit and other points. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Gernosky, of Hamilton and Mrs. I. Lawrence, of Rochester, N.Y.

Caplan-Moss

The marriage of Ruth, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Moss, to Bernard D. Caplan, of Windsor, was solemnized at McCaul Street Synagogue, at 6.30 p.m., Sunday, January 16, Rabbi Gordon and Cantor Wladowsky officiating. The bride who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white satin, quaintly fashioned. Her long tulle veil was draped in Spanish effect and caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honor, Miss Helen Smookler, wore maize georgette and carried a shepherd stalk of pink roses. Dr. Leo Orecklin, of Detroit, was best man. Bridesmaids were Misses Alice Ellenson, Amelia Adler, and Gertrude Adler. They carried shepherd stalks of pale pink roses. Jack Markus, Lou Sukloff and John J. Glass were ushers. A wedding dinner and reception was given at the home of the bride's parents. The out-of-town guests were Mrs. Anna Caplan, mother of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. D. Caplan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith, Mrs. J. Schwartz, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cherniak, Dr. and Mrs. I. M. Cherniak, Mrs. J. Orechkin, and Miss Ettie Weinberg, all of Windsor, Ont.; and Miss Helen Smookler, of Detroit, Dr. Leo Orecklin, of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. I. Levy, of Buffalo, Harry Fine of Ansonville, Mr. and Mrs. A. Leger, of Hamilton, and Miss Lillian Ugar, of Hamilton. Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Caplan will live in Windsor on their return from their wedding trip to Montreal and Quebec.
